

WATER FAMINE IS THREATENED

People Under High Line Pipe System Are Sufferers.

THE MAINS ARE TOO SMALL

COUNCILMAN A. J. DAVIES PROVIDES FOR BIGGER ONES.

The northeastern section of the city, which is under the high line pipe system, is on the verge of a water famine. The trouble is due to the inability of the three-inch mains laid fifteen years ago to sufficiently feed the innumerable house pipes which have been laid in recent years. While water in other sections of the city is running to waste, there is not sufficient water at the university for ordinary purposes. If a fire should break out in that part of Salt Lake the department would be greatly handicapped in subduing the flames, owing to the scarcity of water.

Councilman A. J. Davies came to the relief of the threatened famine-stricken section of the city by introducing a resolution in the city council last evening providing for the substitution of six-inch mains for the present pipes, which will connect the high lines and middle systems. The resolution carried with it an appropriation of $5,000. Superintendent of Waterworks Frank Hines asked for $13,000 with which to improve that system and bring it up to date. His resolution was referred to the waterworks finance committee for investigation.

Reiser Holds Up Liquor Bill.

City Auditor Albert S. Reiser notified the council that he would not pay all of the liquor bill contracted by the councilmen several days ago when they went on a junketing trip up Parley's canyon to inspect the new reservoir site. The bill amounted to $46.40. The $16 for liquor and cigars is objected to by the auditor, who says the members of the council who took the trip will have to raise that amount among themselves. Reiser said the legislative powers conferred upon the council do not permit of their contracting such bills. The whole matter was referred to the finance committee.

Mayor Ezra Thompson's veto of the recommendation of the council that a settlement be effected with Major W. A. Stanton for $300 was voted down by an almost unanimous vote. He wanted $25 for damages done to his property on East Brigham street by water overflowing from the gutters and inundating his property. City Attorney Nye recommended that a settlement be effected for $300, which Major Stanton said he was willing to accept. The council thought he was entitled to the money and voted to give it to him.

The report of City Health Commissioner M. R. Stewart for authority to appoint two additional health inspectors was granted. Their sole duty will be to watch the city for smallpox and see that they do not break the regulations. Dr. Stewart says it is his purpose to punish people in the future who violate quarantine regulations. Their disregard for the same, he intimates, is largely the cause of the persistent spread of smallpox.
